

Walk 8: Lilstock Circular

Length: 2 miles / 3.3 km

Good for: All walkers

Theme: History, Geology and Nature

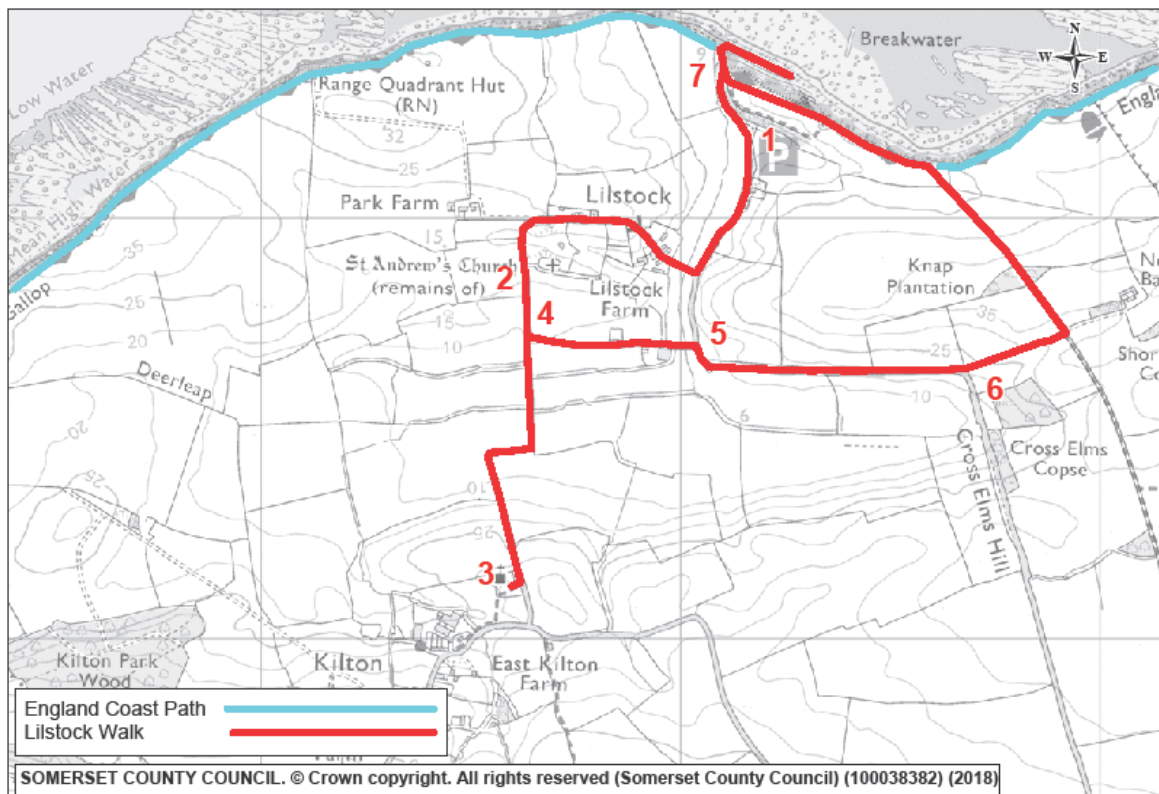

Duration: 1 hours

Notes: This is an easy to moderate walk, with one or two shorter, steeper climbs in places. Lilstock is the site of a port established by the Acland-Hoods, the local Lords of the Manor. It would have serviced an extensive estate bringing goods and coal for its fires and limestone for lime wash, lime mortar and fertiliser. The beach to the west contains Blue Lias pavements - an historic source of paving slabs - and fossil rich rocks. There is a beautiful abandoned church, St Andrew's.

Points of interest:

- Abandoned churches
- Orchids
- Old dry dock remnants
- War-time defences
- Views of Exmoor

Continue along the lane, ignoring side turnings and ascend the hill where gaps in the hedge on your right afford wonderful views of the Quantock Hills and Exmoor in the distance. Stay on the lane and you will eventually come to St Nicholas Church, Kilton on your right. (3) This church is also redundant and now privately owned, but you may enter the churchyard – which is next to an ancient hunting park. From the church retrace your steps back along the lane until you come to a lane on the right. (4) Turn right into the lane and follow it until you come to a T-junction with another lane. (5)

Turn right, then bear left and continue along the road until it turns right. At this point (6) leave the road and continue straight ahead on the permissive footpath. Continue on this path until you come to a track.

Turn left and follow this track which is known as The Old Coach Road which linked the small port to the Fairfield House and its vast estate. Continue on this track until you come to a 2-in-1 gate. Go through the gate and veer slightly to the left to join the England Coast Path. Along this stretch of coast there is an abundance of Pyramid Orchids and occasionally, the rarer, Bee Orchid.

Continue west and you will eventually go down the hill to come to another gate. Go through the gate and walk towards the track. (7) Turn left to follow the path back to the car park or turn right and walk towards the coast, then right again and walk along the path. On your right is the site of what was Lilstock Harbour. The remnants of the slipway and the old dry dock can still be seen running through the pebble beach. Running along the front is the 19th Century promenade laid out by Sir Peregrine Acland-Hood to allow his sickly daughter to be driven up and down in a pony and trap. Within the foot of the cliffs are the remains of an old hotel, houses and lime-kilns and further west are buildings used as sea defences during the Second World War.

Retrace your steps back to point (7) and along the path back to the Car Park.

Facilities: The nearest public toilets are at the car parks at Kilve or Nether Stowey, along with shops and pubs. There is a café at Nether Stowey and Stogursey.
